SECRETARY'S CHIT CHAT

By J. Weinhardt

The results of the nomination ballots are in and most of the qualified candidates have responded. Two more to be heard from before the ballots can be printed. It would be a big help if these people would be more prompt about replying as to their availability to run for office. Final ballots are due to be mailed this year on Sept. 10th. Since both resolutions passed, next year's election will be held quite a bit earlier so that by Convention time it will be known who the officers for 1970 will be. Personally I was very disappointed to find that less than 1/6 of the membership bothered to vote in the nomination balloting. Because of this will be left short of candidates for Director. We need 6 names on the ballot (persons having received 6 or more votes and no 2 living in the same state) and even if the two as yet unheard from are willing to run we will only have 5 names to choose from. Let's hope we get a more representative response on the final ballot.

Quite often I receive a letter from some member wondering why "the article I sent you recently" was not in the last Dutch Reporter. Common sense should explain this. When a controversial article, or rather an article on a controversial subject appears the response is often quite heavy -- more articles than can be used in the limited space now available, so some have to be held over for an issue or two when no articles are coming in so things will be in better balance. The only exception to this is some article which because of dated material would lose its effectiveness by being delayed. We are grateful for these articles that can be held over to help fill out the lean months.

I just learned this week of the passing last year of one of our old-timers. I don't know how widely he was known as he seldom showed anywhere but in Michigan, but I do know that he was well known here and had sold some good Tortoise outside of the State. Anyone who knew Gerrit "Pete" Johnson of Zeeland, Michigan knew that he was a loyal Dutch Breeder and a producer of good Tortoise. We were very sorry to learn of his passing.

CHOOSING THE RIGHT BREED Choosing Sire and Dam

by Tom Shufflebotham

The selection of breeding stock is by no means a small item; it is in fact, the most important consideration in the planning of a rabbitry.

The first thing that one should do, if possible, is to join some local club, get acquainted with the breeders, attend a few shows and look over the exhibitions, and then select the breed that has the most appeal to you; this appeal may be for commercial purposes or simply for fancy. Watch the judge as he makes his class selections and listen carefully to his remarks as he makes his placements, listening for his remarks on good points and also on the poor points of the exhibit, and learn why one animal is placed before another. Talk to the breeders and have them explain the points that you must consider in their particular breed. It is wise to visit many shows and meetings before you make your final selection of breed.

After due consideration you may decide on one breed of rabbits; some breeders make the mistake of buying rabbits before they know WHY they are going into the business, stay briefly with one breed and then switch to another. This is costly, to say the least.

Your choice may be one of the fancy breeds, or it may be one of the commercial breeds. Should you decide on the New Zealand, there are three colors that you may consider -- white, red and black. Select the color that has the most appeal for you and then look up the breeder that has built up a strain over the years in your particular color. Visit with him. There are many reliable breeders who will give you time and assistance in getting the right kind of start.

Among the important considerations you face before you actually spend your money are the background of the breeder and the background of the breed he is keeping. Should you be interested in commercial stock you should find a breeder who has proven his success in that field. You may be sure that he has good stock and that he is consistently producing good stock -- good meat production or good lab stock does not simply happen. It happens because some breeder has consistently made careful selection of both his sire and his dam.

The cheapest start that you can get is the best that your purse can stand. This is especially true in the selection of a buck as his good points are passed on to so many. The production of a doe is going to average four litters a year, whereas a good sire can sire as many as four litters a week. However, important as the buck is, never underestimate the value of your does and the fact that they, too, must be selected with care. It has always been my belief that you should select your buck and doe from the same breeder.

Get used to your stock and learn to cull intelligently. Never keep any stock for breeding purposes that is not at least as good as its sire or dam. It is important that you should be critical and cruel when keeping young does for future dams. Don't keep them if they are not better than their own dam -- then breed them back to their own father. This is the only way you can certainly improve your stock -- whether they are for meat or for competition.

Should you decide on fancy or show stock, the steps are the same but you have more room for consideration -- you may have markings or color. Here again watch show reports and buy from well established strains. Check the pedigree of your stud buck and be sure that his background does not show more than two colors at the most. Colors should not be mixed indiscriminately and any color that is bred in will surely come out. Be sure that you are getting good color in both your buck and doe.

Buy the best you can afford -- animals that have a good background and ones that come as close to the standard of perfection regarding color, type and markings.

I have been most successful in the past with a program of in-breeding and line-breeding. I have not made an outcross. I bought the best buck that I could afford, with does from the same strain and breeder. I kept my best does and bred them back to the sire. When I found in my litters a buck better than his sire, he became the head of my stud. When you make your selection from a good, established breeder he knows the good and bad points of his animals and can advise you on the proper selection of your breeders so that faults may be bred out, weaknesses eliminated, and still retain the good points of your hers.

The cost of hutches, feed and time are the same whether you have mongrels or select stock.

FROM THE EDITOR'S MAIL BAG

Denver, Colorado

Dear Mrs. Weinhardt:

Last spring when I first joined the American Dutch Rabbit Club, I asked your help in referring me to someone who might have some good Dutch stock for sale. You referred me to Clyde and Doris Jones in Fort Worth, Texas.

I contacted these people by mail and then by phone, and consequently purchased my foundation stock from them (Tortoise Dutch -- one senior buck and two senior does). Their courteous efficient manner of doing business was perfect so far as I was concerned.

As a beginner they understood my problems, and patiently answered my questions. They supplied me with very good stock at a very fair price. The rabbits were sent Air Express and arrived right on time, and in excellent condition. And so, a hearty thanks to you for a good referral and to the Jones's for good service.

A satisfied customer,
John Dugopolski

YOU CAN'T BEAT THE DUTCH

CLASSES FOR DUTCH

BY W. Geitzenauer

After reading many articles and hearing both pro and con around the show table, I'd like to clear the air concerning Junior and Senior Dutch.

In regard to a recent article or comment by a lady breeder, let me be the first to tell her that a 6-8 class in Dutch is impossible due to the relative Senior weights of the different breeds of rabbits. The 6-8 class was developed to counteract the underlap that developed in large breeds (10-12# Seniors) and the 6-8 originally meant 6-8 months old. Some breeds do not mature until after the 8th. month. We do have a problem in our standard in either case. By standard, theoretically, a Junior can weigh 8# or as little as 1/2#. The only weight defined is senior weight. This has been around for a long time but the proletariat never seemed to want change whether intentional or not.

There are ways to end this controversy, some with little effort, some not. There are two basic paths to take. Consider, for a minute, that we are a specialty Club formed to propagate the Dutch breed in the best interests of the majority of the breeders. NOTE - I said breeder not club or otherwise. The ARBA and ADRC were formed by breeders to establish a set of standards (value or quality) to work for. An existence without a goal or ideal is pure trash and anti-human nature.

The first path is to consolidate ideas as to either "a change" or "not". This can best be accomplished at an official ADRC meeting. A show of hands would indicate whether the majority favored any change. Consider, if a change were called for, the amount of time the proposed change would take. This would probably be one year in our club's standards committee and as in the past, from 3 to 5 years in the ARBA Committee. We could expect this change about 1973. Again, considering that the ADRC turns over about 100 members per year, five years from now we would theoretically have a replacement of all but a small minority of the present members. Would these new 500 members want the same change or is it because it personally is hurting a few individuals??? If a change is proposed, what could it possibly be???

The only way to justify putting a baby into the judging ring would be as follows:

- | | |
|-----------------------|-------------------------------|
| A. Weight (3 classes) | B. Age (3 classes) |
| Junior 0 - 3# | Junior 0 - 3 months |
| Intermediate 3-4# | Intermediate 3-4 1/2 Mo. |
| Senior 4-5 1/2# | Senior 4 1/2 - Infinity (Mo.) |

Let's see where the majority is going with a show of hands at our meeting at the ARBA Convention. If you feel it is unfair in our democratic club, let's see "your" hand at the convention. You may just have enough "hand-power".
