BREEDING BLACK AND BLUE DUTCH

by Tom Shufflebotham

In a recent Dutch Reporter your secretary mentioned that she could not find any articles on the breeding of blacks and blues. Our club has an educational committee, of which I am chairman, and should there be subjects you wish discussed I am sure that I or one of my committee will be happy to assist you. Through the years I have written many articles on the care and breeding of Dutch and find it hard to write articles that will not be a repetition of what I have already said.

In the many years of breeding and exhibiting Dutch I have found two things to be true -- neither Dutch rabbits nor people change very much.

There are a few simple rules to follow: one of these which I stress very highly is -- what goes in is sure to come out. I know there can be nothing more discouraging than to purchase a Dutch doe of any color, wait for the doe to kindle and find that you have all the colors of Dutch in your litter box.

You will find that all colors of Dutch will breed true to color with the exception of the steel grays, which is a "made" color. There is no doubt that the blacks are the most popular of colors. This is the dominant color and is used in breeding blues, chocolates and steels.

There are two kinds of black -- one is the true breeding black. This is a black, that regardless of what it is bred to, will produce nothing but blacks. You could take a true breeding black, mate him to several hundred blue does and never get anything but blacks out of him. However, not all of his off-spring would be true breeding blacks. The only way to test them is to mate them to several blues and if all the off-spring are black then that particular animal is a true breeding black. This is the same method used for testing woolers in New Zealand. I, myself see no advantage in these true breeding blacks, except that you will generally get much darker eye color from them. I am mentioning this because there are some breeders who wonder why they get no blues out of a black to blue mating from certain blacks.

In the case of blues the outcome is a bit different. Since blue is recessive, mated blue to blue it will produce nothing but blues. In all my years of breeding I have yet to see a black in a litter of blue to blue mating and have yet to speak to a breeder that I know personally, who would dispute this statement. However, in one of our special editions of Small Stock Magazine, Allen Sole made mention in one of his articles that he had known as many as 7% black to come out of blue to blue mating. I can only attest to my own experience and to that of many breeders I have known over the years.

Please notify us immediately of any change in address so that you will not miss copies of the Dutch Reporter

When mating black to blue a common fault is the resultant speckled eyes. To combat this I have resorted to using a blue that comes from a black to black mating (other than the true breeding black), and you will find it quite common to get blues from such a black to black mating. These blues are generally your best colored blues, and when mated back to black, improve the density of color in both blues and blacks.

I know that there are many successful breeders that breed only black to black, but in my experience carrying black to black matings too far has a tendency to produce blacks that do not hold their color. Likewise, blue to blue matings will result in mealy colored ears, and a kind of silver-blue that does not last long.

It is hard to describe what is wanted in a blue. You will find some that call for a second look to distinguish them from a black. They also have a tendency to show a rusty cast to their coat when not in full bloom. There are also those that are too light -- those with the silvery cast and the mealy ears. The ideal is a happy medium, and you will find that this is the color and shade that will look good and last well.

The production of blacks and blues is a very trying problem and calls for strict attention to the selection of breeders. Blacks that carry any white hairs should not be used, especially in your buck, for he is to be used on a number of does. A point often overlooked in blacks is eye color -- these should be as dark a hazel as possible. Many of them are too light and can be traced to the use of too much blue blood, which also results in speckled eyes in both blacks and blues.

There is no teacher like experience -- just keep on trying to breed them better than those you have.

A FEW TIPS ABOUT DUTCH AND JUDGES

by Maynard Fish

I wish to explain in this article my thoughts so someone can get some good out of it and raise better Dutch for show. Just a few lines to prove I have the qualifications to express a few of my views. I have been raising rabbits for 35 years (all kinds, but Dutch are my favorites). I have lived on a farm all of my life, have been raisin the finest quality mink for 17 years, in fact have raised fox, coons, fishers, and skunks for pets all of my life. I have had 17 years of trial and error in raising the worlds best jet black mink, and have topped the worlds fur market in New York city with black mink and dawn pastel shades for the last two years.

What does this all mean to you readers who raise Dutch? It means it takes years of experience to know color on any animal be it rabbits or other fur bearing animals. This word color is a big one in Dutch. To get color and type on any animal (I refer to Dutch) one must have a picture in mind of what is desired and to recognize one when you see it. A Dutch breeder must decide what color or colors he wishes to raise. The steel Dutch is the most difficult to produce in quantity for show purposes. It was stated in the April issue of the Dutch Reporter that the tortoise Dutch needs the most improvement of all the colors. I say it is the steels, because they are harder to produce and there are less of them around the country. The tortoise is more common in the shows today and there are some good ones around, BUT just look for good steels -- you won't find many at any show, even at Tampa only one is listed on the show report.

The tortoise have come a long way down the road but the steels are raised by only a few who can stand the hardships of trying to get a good one in a good breeding program.

Blacks are the cream of the show table and one must have fine blacks to compete for best Dutch in any show today. Most judges will place a black best Dutch at most shows, the show reports prove this in the Dutch Reporter. When cor ered after any show most judges say that the other colors can't stand up to a good black. Here is where I say the judges are wrong -- as there are better Dutch on the show table than a black, the best steels can trim up the blacks any old day, if the judges had the nerve to place them so. Here at Dutch Brook color and type are the top consideration. We breed black to black with some blue to tone the color. In the blues we want a clear rich blue, not too dark. In the grays we want medium gray, in chocolate we want a rich colored chocolate (no rust). We do not believe in breeding chocolate to black as the blacks from these crosses will have a brownish cast, and we want no chocolate in our black breeding program. We prefer jet black to jet black for the best blacks. In steels we like a medium dark steel -- if too dark they lack ticking and run very dark over back and ears. The use of a blue gray buck to a steel will produce some of the finest steels. Too much blue in the bloodline will cause spots in the eyes, the blue Dutch cause all of the trouble with eye specks, spots or moon eyes because it has been introduced too strong in most lines of breeding Dutch today. By using a good blue with a good black steel in pedigree you will find the first cross will result in all blacks. Breed the black does which are halfblood steels back to a steel or blue gray and you will get some dandy medium dark steels. with medium ticking and get rid of some of the brass on the legs. One must not use a good steel or gray in his fine blacks or they will be ruined, as Dutch from such a mating will have far too many white hairs in the black color.

By using gray to steel some nice medium dark grays will be produced but the steels from such a mating will be brassy or rusty or meal bag color half way between steel and gray which one does not want for show. Color and type are the foundation of good Dutch today, YOU MUST HAVE IT.

Now a few lines about judges who have pet colors in Dutch when judging. Very few judges have the nerve to place a good steel or gray best Dutch or best opposite Dutch in any show. (Check your show reports for proof.) Are they afraid of offending the breeders by placing a lowly steel or gray best Dutch? Anyway their next judging assignment may depend on pleasing the many not the few. Most judges do not know steels or grays or how hard it is to produce a winner in these colors. Most judges when selecting best Dutch will line up all the best of each color plus best opposite of each color, and you guessed it; the steels, grays and tortoise are tossed in the ash can without consideration, leaving only the blacks and blues for all the honors. 50% of the judges are not well enough acquainted with Dutch to have an eye for color in varieties other than black and blue. Neither do some of them pay enough attention to the disqualifications of Dutch. For proff, last year I showed a Dutch with a spot in one eye below the lid in five straight shows and five different judges placed this rabbit. I did this on purpose just to see what would happen and proved to myself that these judges needed some education in Dutch judging. I also showed other Dutch with split stops, caught on fore leg and all passed with flying colors. If a judge places such animals they are eligible for registration, or so it seems.

If a judge hasn't raised Dutch he or she better bone up because I say Dutch should be judged by the point system and by a man who knows and raises Dutch. I am a man like Mr. Collins, I have the guts to stand up and fight for what I believe no matter what the odds.

HARD SELL?

by J. Russell Hall

Recently I have heard Dutch breeders complain that there was no market for Dutch rabbits. Upon being asked if he had made use of the "Dutch Reporter" or one of the trade magazines to advertise his stock, one breeder replied in the negative. It takes time to establish a name for yourself in any line of business, and the rabbit industry isn't any different from others in this respect.

In my opinion, if you have good type and color in your Dutch, with anywhere near good markings there should be a market for them. Many would-be breeders, also "old-timers" are always looking for good stock.

An "ad" placed in the trade magazines and/or our own "Dutch Reporter" will let folks know that you have good Dutch. If you continue it for more than one issue your name is kept before the public longer. How do the cigarette and beer companies do it?

They just keep plugging.

The local brewery has a sign hanging up in their office which reads like this:

"The man who has a thing to sell
And goes and whispers down a well
Is not so apt to collar the dollars
As he who climbs a tree and hollers."

CONVENTION BREED CHAIRMAN REPORT

by Robert L. Ernst

According to the last issue of Small Stock magazine the deadline for catalog material for the Convention at Sedalia, Missouri is July 1st. I would like to urge every member who has not sent me a contribution to boost the specials on Dutch for this show to get busy and get his in the mail so it can be included in the listing in the catalog. The location of this year's Convention should be just right to pull in the largest entry of Dutch in history, if the membership will just get behind me and make the prize list interesting enough.

I have written to many of the more regular exhibitors of Dutch in the country and have extended my empty hand to everyone I see at the shows ready to accept any and all specials, but they are very, very slow coming in. Remember, you not only help your Club, but also yourself as your name will be listed on the page of Dutch specials and this is an excellent form of advertising.

To date I have received the following contributions:

- Jack Boughton-----$10.00 - To be placed where needed.
- L & L Johnson----- 1.00 - To be placed where needed.
- Arthur Osmon----- 5.00 - To be placed where needed.
- Clint Dennis----- 5.00 - $1.00 Best Choc., $1.00 1st. Sr. Choc. buck, $1.00
1st. Sr. Choc. doe, $1.00 1st. Jr. Choc. buck,
$1.00 1st. Jr. Choc. doe.
- Mike O'Connell----- 1.00 - Blues.
- Bob Ernst----- 5.00 - Blues.
- Fast & Son----- 1.00 - Blacks.

That's all we have for now. Hope we can send in a bigger report next time.

SECRETARY'S CHIT-CHAT

by J. Weinhardt

Along toward the end of this month ballots will be placed in the mail for the naming of nominees to appear on this year's election ballot. This year, you will not only be nominating a president, vice-president and directors, but also you will NOMINATE candidates for judging at next year's National Dutch show and Convention. The decision to do this was made at the meeting in Tampa, Florida as it was felt that such a method would prove much more fair and result in a larger number of the membership having a say in the matter. Every year before, when the judges were selected in the old manner whereby each member had only one chance to vote for his choice there were many, many judges with only one, two or three votes. This year the six with the most votes on the nominating ballot will be placed on the election ballot (after they have accepted the nomination) and you will get a chance to vote a second time. With this system your vote won't be wasted (as it was when cast for the minority candidates), and the result will be a slate of judges chosen by a majority of the membership rather than a mere handful. Other issues of importance will appear on the ballot, so don't waste any time in sending yours back to the election chairman. A complete membership list of the ADRC will appear later in this Dutch Reporter -- check it before you vote, so you do not spend your vote on someone who is no longer a member of the club.

I have been deeply gratified by the wonderful contributions of articles I have been receiving during the past couple of months, but please don't forget that this is a continuing project and new material is needed every single month to keep up the standard we have set in the past three months. We still could use a good article on the breeding of chocolates and the surface has only been scratched with regard to steels and grays. I can't publish promises and fill very many pages. Maybe you don't agree with some of the ideas that have already been published and if you don't maybe these ideas won't work for everyone else either, so let's hear your side of the story. Flood me with material! I won't promise to put everyone of them in the July issue, as I have to keep an eye on the future, too, but believe me I will use everything of a constructive nature that you send me sometime before too long. Please don't make me go back to my pick and shovel to find interesting material!
