FROM THE OLDTIMER

Many breeders have the idea that the breeding of two prize winning Dutch will inevitably produce show winners; while others claim results from stock that has some disqualification. These statements can be true and false. Both statements are generally true when the animals are from an improved strain. While they can be very untrue when animals of two, or more strains are used. According to genetics these facts are the basis of breeding, but, at times nature does produce outstanding animals from a conglomeration of strains. Animals produced this way do not interest me as prospective breeders. Why? Because they have so many inherited traits and characteristics that may appear in breeding that it would take considerable time in selecting, linebreeding, and inbreeding to begin to approach something like the original breeders.

We should form a definite plan in breeding Dutch if we are to get anywhere. The basic factor is to have a good knowledge of the Dutch rabbit standard as to type, ears, color, and markings. The next step is in the selection of a strain with regards to color. It is the natural thing to select a strain that conforms closest to the standard. The third step in a selection of a strain is the consistency of producing the desirable physical characteristics in the following order: type, color, ear length, and eye color. With regard to markings it will be a matter of selection of breeders within the strain to acquire the desired standard markings. In other words if we have certain desired characteristics fairly well fixed in our strain we can then breed for the desirable markings. There is one point to watch in our breeding for markings and that is not to lose any of the already fixed characteristics. It is better generally to have, if possible, the above four characteristics in the breeders. Some breeders may say that it is next to impossible to secure strains that have these desired traits, but I have come in contact with several strains, that have proven them so. In breeding for markings I believe that the best policy is to select animals that have opposite faults in the same markings: i.e., one that has low cheeks with one that has high cheeks; short stops versus long stops, etc. I also like each animal to carry a fairly well balancing of the markings. Balancing of markings is another trait that I like to have in the breeding animals and is only found in the process of breeding through several generations.

You will also find that some individuals have a strong tendency to transmit to their offspring their own characteristics with regard to markings, such as long stops, etc. This is another point which we may use to an advantage if the markings are anyway desirable.

The records for breeders should not only consist of the pedigree of the animal, but also the noted physical characteristics and any others that have been found through breeding. This will be found very helpful as we proceed in selecting breeders and eliminating faults or undesirable characteristics.

In purchasing breeders one should make a survey of the various desirable strains. Those that show a fair consistency in winning. Next secure some idea as to the breeding operations, i.e., consistency of reproducing of characteristics without the infusion of outside strains.

Production of good Dutch rabbits is one long process of elimination of breeders that produce the undesired traits and the retaining of those that end to give the desired results.

These suggestions are by no means complete or represent the best way in the production of Dutch rabbits. Certain details may have been overlooked and the object in mind is to creat lines of thought on this subject, as it is a very important one to the Dutch rabbit breeder. These are suggestions from a Dutch breeder, who by all means is no authority, but just wishes to express his findings.

CONFUSION

by J. C. Early

Mrs. Weinhardt suggested that as we are having the National Dutch show in Oklahoma next year, I write something for the Reporter. I was reluctant to do this because of my limited education, I am a poor hand at composing anything, and being a poor typist, there will be many errors in it, unless someone corrects them before they get in print. Then, like the writer of the article in the August issue, who requested that his name be withheld, I have been raising Dutch for only four or five years and didn't care to expose my ignorance to some of the old-timers. However, after reading the article by the "Old-Timer" in the same issue I could not resist the temptation to pop off a little. I notice that he advises getting a buck that is not related to the does, and to get a new unrelated buck occasionally. You notice I have not said that I was a breeder. I think anyone should have at least twenty years experience before he could qualify for that title. Lets just say that I am a student of Herbert Hitzsche and Tom Shufflebotham, trying the very best I can to raise good Dutch. Now both of them advise against the above system. At least that is what I inferred from their writings. If I am wrong will someone please correct me. I think everyone will agree that they are authorities on the breeding of Dutch. This difference of opinion does not bother me, as I have my program worked out and am staying with it. But, we are having new beginners every day and what could be more confusing to them than to have one old-timer say--do one thing and another say do just the opposite?

Another thing, Mr. Old-Timer, you say that Blues should not be bred to blues only every third generation. I know you will say that I am only another Amateur, but I would like to take issue with you on that statement. I think that I have about the best color in my blues of anyone in this section of the country. I have been told that I have by those who should know. While I will admit that you should have some black in your blues, I don't think as much as you recommend is at all necessary. I find that if your buck or doe either carries some black, even as far back as their grand parents, that you don't have to worry about the color. You may believe it or not, I have never had one with spots in the eyes, unless they might have been in the eyes of a mis-marked one that I didn't examine closely. I may be wrong, but it is my personal opinion that spots in the eyes are caused by too much strange blood. I challenge anyone to have any better colored blues in the National Dutch show next year than mine. Not only that, but we Okies are going to give all you fellows some competition in all of the colors. No matter who the Judge is, if you will just tell us who you want, we will help you elect him. We intend to have the biggest and best National Dutch show there has been yet. When it is all over, we want Oklahoma to be known as the Dutch Rabbit Capitol of the world.

In conclusion I would like to say that we are all very appreciative to all the old-timers for their advice and for the work they have done and realize that had it not been for them the American Dutch Rabbit would not be what it is today, the best show rabbit in the world. I am especially appreciative for the help I have gotten from the two I mentioned above, both from their writings and the personal letters I have gotten from them. With this I will sign off with the same old statement--YOU CAN'T BEAT THE DUTCH.

STEEL DUTCH AND GRAY DUTCH

Published: Wisconsin State RBA Bulletin, Aug. 1956

by David L. Brueggemann

I. Mr. Dutch Breeder -- vs -- The Steel and Gray Dutch

"You can't beat the Steel Dutch and the Gray Dutch," at least that's my opinion. There's nothing more lovely in any breed, including the Dutch, than a wild natural color to my way of thinking.

After breeding and showing several specimens in these colors, however, it seems to me that the poor steel and gray dutch is a much maligned little creature, and also a much misunderstood one.

In the first place, the average breeder of blacks, chocolates, tortoisés, and blues won't get near the grays and steels, much less take a second look at them. And, it would seem, underneath it all, the average Dutch breeder of the other colors either does not recognize beauty or is genuinely afraid of the possible consequences in the breeding of the natural-colored Dutch.

It is to be admitted (and a few will not admit it) that the Steel and Gray Dutch are the hardest colors to breed to perfection, this being evidenced by the fact that these colors today do none of the B.O.B. winning that is so characteristic of the other colors, yet surely the Dutch breeder, breeding for sport, and trusting measurably on Lady Luck, will have that never-say-die spirit of going all-out in his hobby and coming home with one or more of those lovely varieties, the Steel Dutch and the Gray Dutch.

Please, don't despair of the lonely Gray-Steel fanciers. Rather, why not join them?

1957 NATIONAL DUTCH SHOW

by Clinton Dennis

Pres. Oklahoma Dutch Specialty Club

Concerning the 1957 All Dutch Show which will be sponsored by the Dutch Specialty Club of Oklahoma, we have selected the dates of April 12th., 13th. and 14th. The Show will be held in one of the exhibition buildings of the beautiful new Oklahoma State Fair Grounds located in Oklahoma City. We have guaranteed to the American Dutch Rabbit Club that we will pay a generous amount of cash for the winners in all classes and am going to make every effort to exceed our guarantee, believing that you can ship a rabbit farther for a cash premium than for the biggest trophy that money can buy. Certainly there will be a great number of trophies available and a number of those will be furnished by Oklahoma breeders.

In order to assist in providing the money for these premiums we are going to print a catalog and advertising will be sold as follows: $25.00 for a full page, $15.00 for one-half page, $8.00 for one-fourth page, $4.00 for one-eighth page, and $2.00 for Judges and special listings.

Mr. T. J. Logan of 2616 S.W. 61st. St., Oklahoma City is Show Chairman and Judge J. M. Brown, 2116 S.W. 67th. St., Oklahoma City is Secretary of the Dutch Specialty Club of Oklahoma. Either of these two gentlemen would be happy to accept your order for advertising on any specials that the breeders have to offer.
